Sociology Revise requirements for BA in Sociology	Sociology (120 Credits) A student may be admitted to the Sociology program upon making their intentions known to the department. This is a prototype of one of many ways to complete the Bachelor of Arts in Sociology in four years. The program has built-in flexibility. A Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology requires a minimum of 34 30 credits of sociology coursework in which students must maintain a C average. All majors must complete five required core courses: Introduction to Sociology (SOC 101), Development of Social Theory (SOC 310), Research Methods in Sociology (SOC 317 [M]), Quantitative Techniques in Sociology Understanding the Social World with Data (SOC 321) or Quantitative Methods for Criminal Justice (CRM J 321) , and one of the following “capstone experience” integrative capstone courses: Internship Capstone (SOC 495 [CAPS][M]), From Theory to Practice Capstone (SOC 496 [CAPS][M]), or Research Practicum Capstone (SOC 497 [CAPS][M]). Students must also complete 15 credits of elective courses in sociology and 12 credits in a concentration area, half of which must be in 300-400-level courses. Concentration courses enable students to individualize their programs of study to best meet their academic and career goals. Students select concentration courses from a department-approved list and in consultation with an academic advisor. Strategic Communication Add new undergraduate certificate on the Vancouver campus: Advertising	Advertising Students participating in the Advertising certificate will receive comprehensive, career-focused training in the strategic, creative, and analytical foundations of contemporary advertising. The certificate integrates advertising theory with experiential, project-based learning that mirrors real-world advertising practice across digital, social, and branded media environments. A core principle of this certificate is preparing students to translate persuasive theory into effective advertising strategies and execution.	8-27

	This certificate is targeted for undergraduate students from any major who seek practical advertising skills applicable to careers in advertising, marketing, brand strategy, digital media, content creation, and strategic communication. The certificate requires completion of the following courses: COM 210; COMSTRAT 301 or 305; COMSTRAT 310 or MKTG 450; COMSTRAT 380 or MKTG 360; and COMSTRAT 476. Through these courses, students engage in hands-on projects such as developing advertising campaigns, creating multimedia content, analyzing audiences and consumer behavior, building brand strategies, and promoting content across digital platforms. Emphasis is placed on experiential learning, collaborative work, and the production of professional, portfolio-ready deliverables aligned with industry expectations. Upon completion of the certificate, students will be prepared to apply advertising principles in professional settings, contribute to creative and strategic teams, and pursue entry-level roles or internships in advertising, marketing, branding, digital media, and related fields.
